Principal Contractor Liability

As many BSG members will be aware, companies have a duty of care to ensure that any contractor appointed is competent to perform tasks safely, without unacceptable risks to other employees, members of the public as well as others on site. When an accident does occur, through the negligence of a sub-contractor, the Principal Contractor (PC) can also be liable if it did not take the necessary steps to appraise the company employed and perform management checks to ensure that the agreed standards of operation were being carried out correctly.

Sub-contractors should only be allowed to carry out work on site if they have been vetted and approved by the Principal Contractor. Even if the same sub-contractor has been used for a number of years, Principal Contractors may still need to regularly assess them to ensure that their business is adhering to its legal obligations – as detailed in regulation 8 of CDM 2015: Managing Health & Safety in construction L15.

How can BSG help?

BSG can help by assessing the health and safety competence of a sub-contractor before a contract is awarded, or for contractors that are already employed. Companies that meet the required health and safety standards set by BSG's accreditation will be approved to work with the BSG Member (Principal Contractor). Those companies which are declined will be invited to work with BSG to improve their health and safety competence to an acceptable standard.

What does it cost?

The cost is £102, which is chargeable to the sub-contractor making the application to be assessed. BSG members that use the service will be able to login and view their sub-contractors' applications online.

How does it work?

BSG members that would like to use our Contractor Assessment Service can register and invite their sub-contractors to apply for BSG's accreditation through an online portal.
